How the Library repairs damaged items, assesses issues

Library books are always on the move! Whether it is from a patron's home to the Library or from library to library, wear and tear is bound to happen. In those cases, the Library has a special space called "The Book Hospital", where books in need of care go to be repaired by our staff Book Doctors. Book damage comes in many forms, from broken book bindings to torn pages to liquid damage. If you notice a book has damage when it is checked out, please do not repair it at home. Simply inform the Circulation Desk staff of the issue and they will take the next steps to see it gets repaired. The Library also recommends informing staff of damage that occurs while the book is in your possession. We understand accidents happen and will work with patrons to assess fines and replacement. For more information, call or visit the Library today!
